

Jennifer Miller, MEd. has worked with educators and families for thirty years to help them become more effective with children by understanding and cultivating their social and emotional development. She is founder of the organization Confident Parents, Confident Kids with 24K blog subscribers and she authored and illustrated the book “Confident Parents, Confident Kids: Raising Emotional Intelligence In Ourselves and Our Kids”. She has served as a regular expert contributor to NBC’s TODAY Parenting, National Parent Teacher Association, Highlights for Children and PBS WNET. She co-founded SEL for Ohio, a statewide network to champion social and emotional learning and serves on the leadership team for SEL4US. She frequently speaks at conferences, offers coaching to parents, consults with schools and districts, and conducts workshops in Ohio and nationally. Based in Columbus, Ohio, Jennifer is wife to Jason Miller and mother Ethan Miller, an 11th grader at Wellington.

Jason Miller, MA. PCC has over twenty-five years of experience as an Organizational Development and Operations leader, coach, and consultant. Jason currently has his own coaching and consulting practice called Inner Sound, and serves on the leadership and faculty team of the Hudson Institute of Coaching. He cultivates a more purpose-led approach by helping clients to shift focus from outward achievement and external validation to inner wisdom, joy, creativity, and contribution. Jason has coached and developed leaders and teams across multiple industries and Fortune 500 clients—including Google, Amazon, Panera, OhioHealth, Accenture, Caterpillar, The Gap, and Fidelity Investments. In Columbus, Ohio, Jason is husband to Confident Parents Founder Jennifer Miller and father to Ethan Miller, an 11th grader at Wellington. Learn more at Inner Sound Coaching & Consulting, LLC
